Is There Another Way to Assess Students and Prepare Them for College?

Kathy Rehfield-Pelles
Superintendent—Consortium Schools

HIGHLIGHTS OF CONSORTIUM SCHOOLS

PERFORMANCE-BASED ASSESSMENTS

- ⇒ Literary Essays demonstrating analytic thinking
- ⇒ Problem-Solving in Mathematics demonstrating high level of conceptual knowledge
- ⇒ Original Science Experiments based on understanding of the scientific method
- ⇒ Social Studies Research Papers using evidence and argument
- ⇒ Oral Presentations of each graduation level project to a panel of educators, peers and external evaluators

TESTIMONIALS

- ⇒ "Kids were running down the halls in excitement after passing their PBAT presentations. They had such a sense of accomplishment, something that never happened with the Regents." - Consortium Principal
- ⇒ "The PBATs helped me keep up with all the writing in college. Everyone else was like 5-7 page papers, what? I was like, I got this. PBATs made sure I wrote a lot all the time in all my classes so I was ready." -Consortium HS Graduate

What is special about Consortium high schools?

- Schools have a waiver from New York State to give performance-based assessments (PBATs) instead of most Regents exams
- Innovative, inquiry-based teaching and learning; discussion-based classrooms
- Project-based, hands-on learning opportunities with attention to student choice
- 85 % of teachers remain in schools for over 5 years
- Community service & internships
- Certified college preparatory courses while in Consortium schools
- Schedules built around student needs
- Opportunities for local trips and international travel
- School staff supported through citywide collaboration and professional development with other Consortium schools
